Introduction

Welcome to the LAAS British Isles Airfield Guide.

The purpose of this Guide is to enable you to plan your aircraft trips with the knowledge of what airfields, airstrips and helipads are around you, how many aircraft are based there and if any type of aircraft e.g. gliders, dominate.

Airfields are mapped on a regional basis and their geographic co-ordinates are given, together with the number of aircraft estimated to be based there. Note that aircraft estimates only relate to civil aircraft – military aircraft are excluded.

A total of 879 airfields are covered – ‘airfield’ here includes airports, airfields, airstrips, helipads and heliports.

Each airfield is believed to be an active one. Generally, airfields with two or more aircraft which have been mapped on the LAAS ‘Ports of Call’ webpage are covered but there are also some which have only one or even no civil aircraft based. These include

- Air show / fly-in venues e.g. Boxted, Lundy
- Highly visible emergency services bases e.g. Air Ambulance, Search and Rescue, Police
- Public resources e.g. London Heliport, Scottish Island landing strips
- Airfields with scheduled services e.g. Scottish Islands such as the tidal airport at Barra in the Outer Hebrides
- Military airfields, for completeness

Generally omitting airfields with just one or no residents has a number of advantages: it

- Reduces congestion on the maps and allows the airfield name to be included, rather than a reference number
- Excludes many farmers’ sensitive airstrips
- Reduces time wasted visiting fields which were once active but have now ceased flying operations
- Focuses on the "more productive" sites

Lists of the aircraft based at each airfield are given on the LAAS ‘Ports of Call’ webpage at the Club’s website at www.laasdata.com and updates are first published in the LAAS monthly magazine ‘Aviation News & Review’.

In addition, on the LAAS ‘Ports of Call’ webpage there are some free downloads available or under development:

- a Google Earth airfield file which produces a single map covering all of the airfields mapped, and
- TomTom and Garmin files for downloading the co-ordinates of all the airfields onto those satellite navigation (‘Sat Nav’) devices

This Guide complements, and draws heavily upon, three key LAAS productions:

- the LAAS ‘British Isles Civil Aircraft Register 2013’ (BICR)
- the LAAS ‘Foreign Registered Aircraft in the UK’ (FRA) webpage at www.laasdata.com/fra
- the LAAS ‘Ports of Call’ webpage at www.laasdata.com/ports-of-call

Credits

In producing this Guide, special thanks are due to the teams who have produced the source data mentioned above: the BICR Team of Robert Hoddinott, Derek Hoddinott, Kelvin Cross and John Vasek; the FRA Team of Steve Hines and John Reynolds, and the Ports of Call Airfield Team of Kevin Jacomb, John Vasek and Derek Hoddinott. Their work has made this Guide possible.

Visiting Airfields

Please use the information provided in this Guide sensibly. It should be remembered that all airfields are private or restricted property and visitors must ask permission to enter them. In particular, you must obtain permission to go airside, enter hangars and take photographs. Be polite when asking and do take ‘No’ as a final answer – there are many reasons why a visit may not be convenient when you are there. Even when permission is granted, great care should be taken when moving around aircraft particularly with regard to propellers which could start up without warning. Some airfield owners insist on high visibility (‘hi-viz’) vests being worn so be prepared but do not use one unless instructed to do so. Finally, thank the airfield contact when you leave the property – this maintains good relations and confirms that you have finished your visit. DO NOT spoil things for others who visit later – permission can rapidly be withdrawn and threaten our hobby. This has just happened at a number of airfields.

Always ask yourself – “How would I feel if a stranger went down my garden and started trying to see what was in my garden shed or started looking in my garage at my valuable vintage car without asking me?”

You are on private property, please respect it.

The comprehensive Guides referenced in Appendix 2 give airfield contact details – please use them.

This PDF Version

This version of the Guide has been produced in PDF format in order to:

- make it portable on laptops, tablets, eReaders, etc.
- provide hyperlinks to
 - pages within the Guide - from the Contents, Map of the Regions, Index (look for underlined text or text in blue or purple)
 - very importantly, provide hyperlinks to airfield pages on the LAAS website so that the latest listing of residents and news can be accessed
 - other sources of data - from Appendix 2
- provide the ability for the Guide to be searched using PDF reader software

The opportunity has also been taken to use colour to help make features stand out.

Some blank pages have been included to enable certain split regions' maps to be viewed side-by-side, and for some regions' map and table to be similarly viewed together.

Finally, we welcome your comments and additional material. Please send any comments on this Guide to pocmapping@laasdata.com and any airfield logs to portsofcall@laasdata.com

Layout and Definitions

Region - The British Isles has been divided into a number of Regions for reporting purposes in LAAS's monthly 'Aviation News & Review' magazine. This Guide uses the same Regions but in order to keep the maps uncluttered, some of these have been split across more than one page. For each Region a list is given of the County and Unitary Authorities contained within it for the purposes of this publication. The actual drawn boundaries have been digitised by hand from various source data and are intended to be indicative only.

Airfield – The name of the airport, airfield, airstrip, helipad, heliport.

The airfield name used in the tables is that given on the LAAS 'Ports of Call' webpage. The LAAS naming convention for small airfields is generally of the form 'Village-Farm'. Names of airfields on the maps have been greatly shortened to reduce space: the Farm name has been omitted and where more than one farm exists in a village, the first letter of the Farm name has been added to differentiate them e.g. Chiseldon-D for Draycott Farm and Chiseldon-L for Lower Upham Farm.

Lat – Latitude in decimal degrees. All are positive numbers, North of the Equator.

Long – Longitude in decimal degrees. Negative numbers are West of Greenwich, positive numbers are East of Greenwich.

Note that the Lat / Long co-ordinates normally relate to the midpoint of the longest runway. In a few cases, an alternative point may be selected if it is a strong focal point e.g. the middle of a classic RAF three runway triangle. Be aware that farms may use different fields as climate dictates e.g. some may be waterlogged, or crops are rotated. The Lat / Long co-ordinates are to the world-based WGS84 reference system as used by mapping organisations such as Google and Bing, and by Sat Nav organisations such as TomTom and Garmin.

Grid Reference – Ordnance Survey (OS), Ordnance Survey Ireland (OSI) or Ordnance Survey of Northern Ireland (OSNI) six-number grid reference. This corresponds to the Lat-Long location. This grid reference is used in OS/OSI/OSNI atlases and maps.

Postcode – Note that an airfield may be covered by more than one Postcode. The Postcode given corresponds to the Lat-Long location. Bear in mind that Postcodes cover an area and therefore will only get you close to the airfield.

Important Note

The location references – Lat/Long, OS/OSI/OSNI Grid, Postcode – will only guide you to a point on the boundary of the airfield closest to the midpoint of the longest runway, NOT the entrance and NOT a favoured viewpoint. This is for a number of reasons:

- An airfield map on the LAAS website aims to give the general location of the airfield, not specific points on it
- Adding multiple locations would become too time-consuming, detailed and confusing
- Entrances are not necessarily the best place to go – those at company and military bases, in particular, often have no view of the based aircraft

You should use a map, the LAAS airfield page and some of the reference material in Appendix 2 to find the entrance and best viewing points.

BICR Based – The number of civil aircraft estimated as based in July 2013 as reported by the LAAS 'British Isles Civil Aircraft Register' Team.

FRA Based - The quantity of non- G-/EI-/M- civil aircraft estimated as based in July 2013 as reported by the LAAS 'Foreign Registered Aircraft in the UK' Team.

Total Based – The total of BICR Based + FRA Based. Remember that they refer only to civil aircraft and exclude military-registered aircraft.

Note that some airfields are the nominal base for specific airline fleets and have been credited with the whole of an airline's fleet, where in fact the fleet will be dispersed across a number of operational bases. For example, the whole Ryanair fleet is counted in Dublin's numbers.

Note that numbers are given as a guide only, as they are constantly changing. Actual numbers seen / identified at a base can be considerably lower due to such factors as gliders being kept in trailers, microlights being roaded-in for flight from the owner's home, microlight wings being rolled up and unidentifiable, and airline fleets being dispersed from their nominal base.

Type – An indication of whether the airfield is a specialist site for one general type of aircraft e.g. Helicopters, Gliders, Microlights and Autogyros. 'Microlights' include both flex-wing and 3-axis aircraft. The general criterion adopted in this document for determining a specialist site is if 75% or more of the BICR based aircraft are of the same general type. In addition, given the much lower population of Autogyros, an indication of a 'significant' number of them has been identified as there being at least 5 Autogyros based - this is shown as '(Autogyros)'.

Military types are excluded throughout. Where a type is noted at a military base e.g. 'Gliders (Military)', the type relates to the civil aircraft based only.

Additional notes are added where they are believed to be helpful e.g. to show which airfields are military ones, or where one brand of aircraft dominates

Regional Maps

The regional maps show the name of each airfield followed by the total aircraft based there in brackets e.g. Booker(231).

Unfortunately the number of airfields leaves little space for the inclusion of major roads and cities by which to identify a Region's coverage.

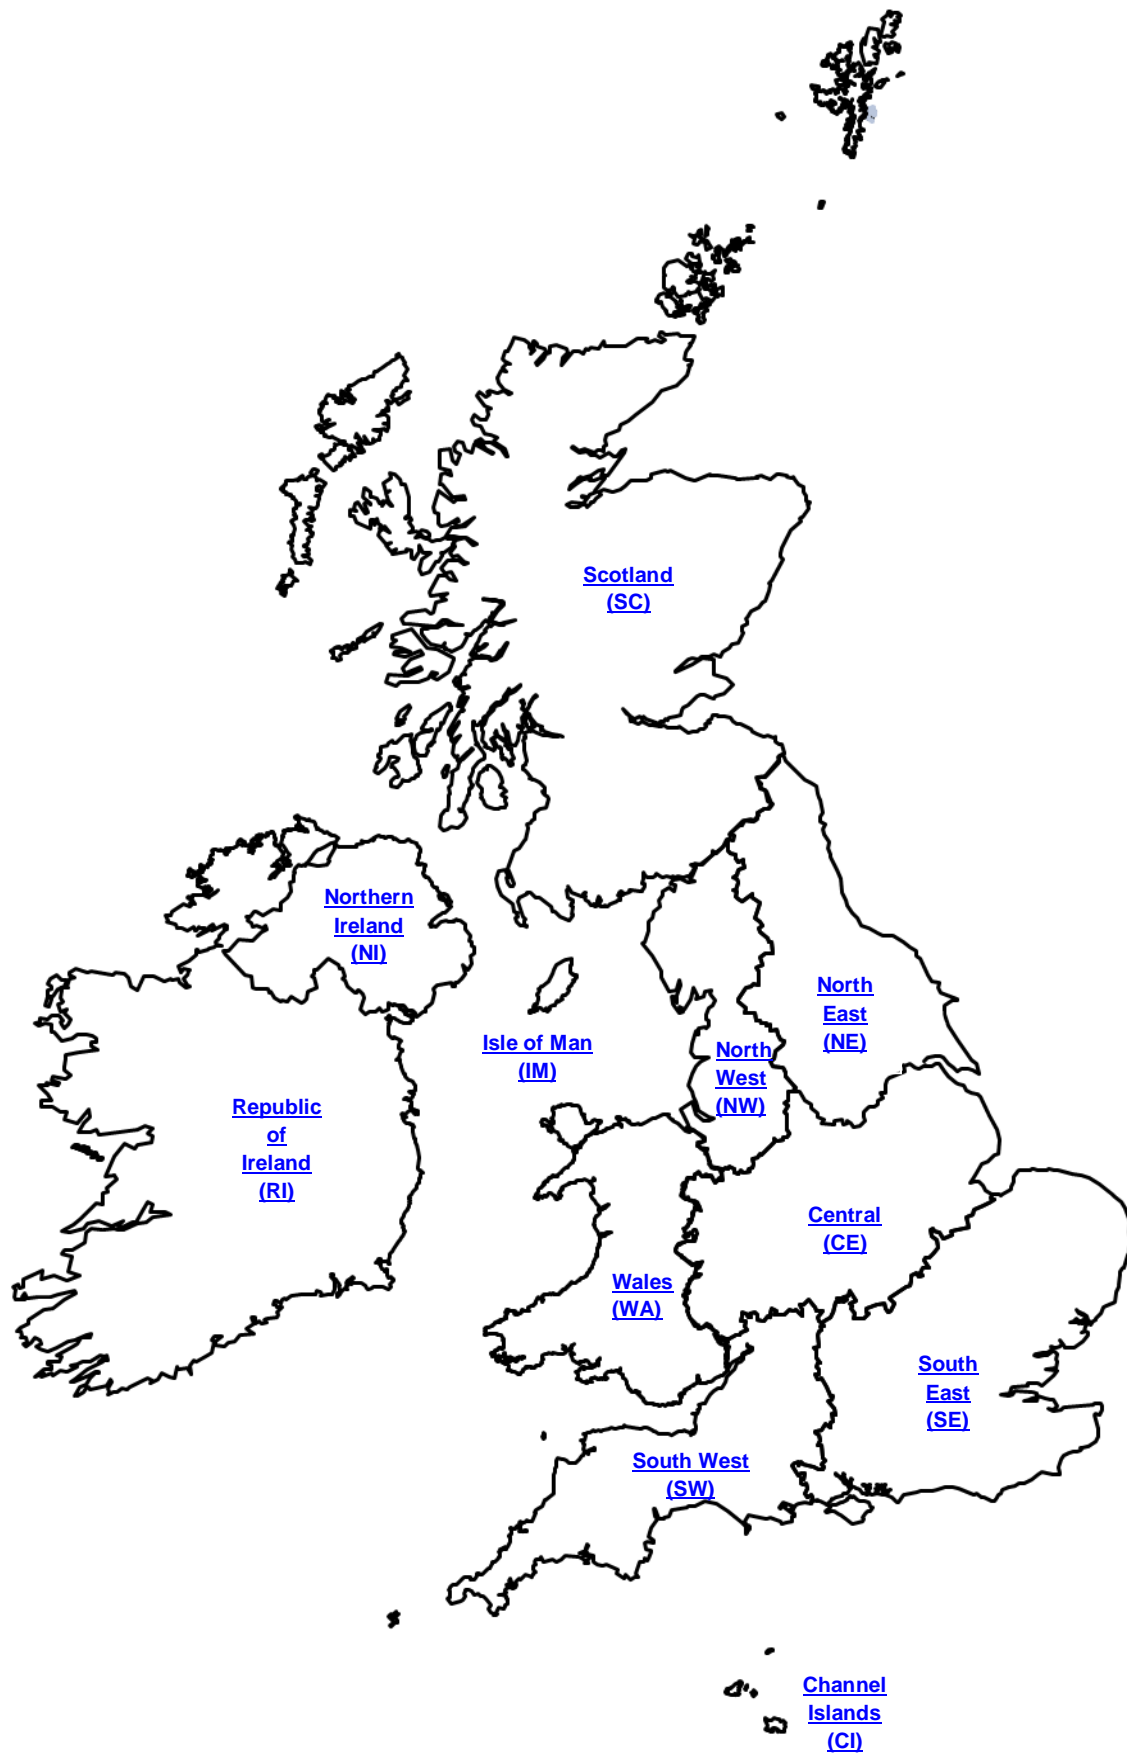

Instead, the maps show the names of adjoining Regions and their boundaries (shown by short dashed lines). Oceans, seas etc bordering a Region are also noted in order to help understanding and some selected airfields' names are shown in bold to help you quickly orientate yourself with the map's coverage and scale.
